Jobs in Peril

FOREIGN COMPETITION in the shipbuilding industry is now re-emerging in such strength after the postwar lull that there is a serious threat to future employment in British yards.

Accordingly, 12,000 workers at Vickers-Armstrong's shipyard at Barrow-in-Furness yesterday given a sober warning of the need for conscientious work and full co-operation in cutting production costs so that tenders can be competitive as possible.

Mr. D. E. Metcalfe with his dinghy. A CLOSE-UP view of a seal in the lumber between the dinghy and the boat was taken by Mr. Donald Metcalfe, 35, Southgate, Heston, and Mr. Thompson, of Hull-rd, Heston.

Mr. Metcalfe stopped the motor and the seal swam towards them, dived at a distance of 100 yds. and swam towards them again, diving once more at 100 yds. distance.

HULL GETS MORE THAN 50 coloured stowaways every year. They come into our ports as well, and already have established colonies at London, Liverpool, and Cardiff.

Stowaways Should Be Sent Back Home

BY HULL DAILY MAIL SPECIAL REPORTER... UNDER COVER of the hot, hazy tropic night, carrying only a small bundle with food and drink for a few days, the small, slim West African boy slips aboard the ship.

Moving with almost feline grace and quiet, he glides through the darkness, the colour of his skin and the swiftness of his stealth creating the keenest watch.

For Johnny's immediate relief is transferred by a dream—a vision of Hull and the security, wealth and splendour of his own country.

Colony of Stowaways... Hull Has No Colony Yet... Colonies of these stowaways have settled in Liverpool, London and Cardiff, but Hull has no colony due to its strict immigration laws.

Arrested on Arrival... Hull is a continuing, fluctuating problem. Over the years, the number of stowaways who have passed through the port has increased.

Many Don't Want Work... On release, usually at Leeds or Northampton, they are employed in various capacities for a full year and are then repatriated.

Some get work, some do not, many do not want to work. They are usually employed in various capacities for a full year and are then repatriated.

Dazzled by 'Paradise'... Impetus to continued large scale illegal immigration is economic. Wages for natives in West Africa are low and there is scarce. They are dazzled by illusory prospect of a 'paradise' in Britain. They know that there is a steady and mainly adequate income to be had from national assistance.

Want Attention in the Law... Shipowners have been at pains to make it as difficult as possible for these men to get into the country. They have to pay a large sum of money to get their papers and to pay for the cost of their passage.

Need for Action... On the other hand, social workers who are the only realistic solution in the rapid abolition of the 'Dumfries' country of these immigrants.

Risk Death... All ship's masters can then do is to see that they do not put them to work until the ship has been cleared by the British port.
